

Living as I do in a rural area, I depend heavily on the Internet for resources for my work, which is necessary but not well paid. Having my resources slowed because they are useful mainly to scholars and therefore not "commercially" high priority would be a blow both to me and to the field of religious scholarship in which I work. Not everything in the world is, or should be, for sale. Please preserve Net Neutrality.